New first-of-its kind survey finds Ohio parents support the Whole Child Framework and prioritizing equity in education. Learn more at <https://cdfohio.org/finding-unity-and-common-ground/>. #WholeChild

Ohio's Whole Child Framework

places the whole child at the center, with district, school, family and community supporting the needs of the whole child using a comprehensive approach. A whole child approach broadens district and school focus beyond academics to include meeting students' physical and mental health, social-emotional, and safety needs.

I believe that school/home/community are all intricately interconnected in the education of a child. This includes academics, emotional health, working with others and finding one's place among others (contributions) as well as mental health. None of these can be successfully accomplished in a vacuum (exclusive of the other components).
